The "Pink Star," a 59.60-carat fancy vivid pink diamond, set the auction record at $71.2 million in April 2017 at Sotheby's in Hong Kong, highlighting the extraordinary value of rare diamonds.

Conflict diamonds, also known as "blood" diamonds, have fueled wars, particularly in Africa during the late 20th century. The Kimberley Process, initiated in 2003, aims to eliminate this trade; however, issues persist—approximately 1-2% of diamonds sold today may still be conflict-related.
